Part of the problem of elections is that it makes elected officials think that whatever they do, they do with the full consent of the governed. This begets corruption in a somewhat paradoxical way. The truth is that the form of government ultimately matters very little. What is most important is that our leaders are moral and both understand and can execute in favor of the common good, i.e. God.

We can dream like Plato for a philosophical ruler, but welcoming is the swamp of power. What's as much paradoxical is that despite many politicians, at least in the UK, but I can assume similarities are present, who study philosophy, many when handed power only abide by the beliefs of their opinions.

What the founders would think if they witnessed what had become of their nation.

A lot of people haven't been following gun laws for a very long time already.

I'll leave you with one huge example of proof: New Jersey made it illegal to possess/own any magazine larger than 10 round capacity. This law required, under penalty of fines and jail, that all owners had to turn them into police. This went into effect December 10 2018. All reports out to 9 to 12 months AFTER that date report that not a single magazine, NOT ONE, was ever turned in.

<https://reason.com/2018/12/20/new-jerseys-gun-owners-do-not-seem-eager/?amp>

<https://www.buckeyefirearms.org/nine-months-nj-magazine-ban-zero-magazines-surrendered>

People really don't give a fuck anymore. Not even in massive liberal blue states. No one cares to follow any of these fake and illegal laws anymore.

When did the Nazis use the police against normal German citizens demonstrating against communists?

By the time the Nazis took power, the communists had already been put down by CITIZENS, not the State. The SA and Freikorps dealt with them while the ineffectual Weimar government spent the whole time hand wringing.

How are aspects of socialism a problem? Is it not right, and even in the bible to help your neighbor? Shouldn't everyone be able to get by on a full time job without having to work themselves to death? Shouldn't everyone be able to get access to the healthcare they need? Shouldn't affordable housing and mental health be available to people who are in need of it? Shouldn't we have a good public education system?

All indications are that many groups will be open carrying with rules of engagement to fire upon anyone attempting to stop or disarm them. Information is hard to get because groups have sealed their lips so the pussy alphabet boys won't get them but I've heard from a couple groups this is what's going down.

And the proud boys have already verified they'll have over 1000 members there. At previous events they almost all show in full battle rattle so it's not a stretch to assume they'll be armed this time. No one owns full battle rattle without also being a gun owner with strong pro-2a support.

(Gura won Heller and MacDonald at USSC)

If those guns remained legal (as they should) we would have to have a real discussion on the people we allow in our nation. It would force us to.

If they cannot help themselves with the 2nd amendment, maybe the solution isn't to destroy the 2nd for law-abiding gun owners, but is to repatriate them to their nation.

The Capitol Police force reports directly to Congress and is the only force to do so. There are roughly 3,000 on the force but that does not include the civilian employees. It does include fat ass donut eaters and pencil pushers who have never actually had to face violent mobs and will likely piss, shit themselves, and run if shit gets hot.

I'm running a new reality show called "Survivor: Commie Air", and every week, viewers get to vote a commie off the chopper. Biden has been getting a lot of votes lately, so this wednesday, we're going to fulfill his lifelong dream and get him into the White House.

We're even going to help him bypass term limits and stay in office for the rest of his life!

note for glowies and such: This post is intended solely as comedy, and it in no way represents any sort of threat, declaration of intent to commit an illegal act, or declaration of intent to induce another to commit an illegal act. It's a joke.

Si, unconstitutional laws are not laws. They hold no power of law, citizens need not obey it and law enforcement has no duty to enforce it. That being said if you're a "just doing your jerb" corrupt DC police officer that only cares about their pension and has no problems being the tendrils of their corrupt mayor then they most definitely will. If you plan on ignoring the DC "laws" make sure you're with an overwhelmingly large number of other pedes doing the same.

If you know any LE on the fence, reach out to them, offer to help them if they do the right thing. From a constitutional standpoint no mandate or law can supersede the 2nd Amendment. They will try to get you with all of their red tape and bureaucratic bullshit they have installed along the way. If you have a permit in your home state, in theory you would need a permit for every single state you intend to travel through including DC. (Remember what they tried to do to Kyle?)

This entire thing is a joke really. Our founding fathers never intended for all of this bullshit they were clear in their intent when they said "the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, SHALL NOT BE INFRINGED." If there were to be any limits around this they would have been enshrined in the 2nd Amendment as well which they weren't.

What's evil is enabling the government to take control over someone's labor, i.e. socialized healthcare.

Imagine being forced to work because it's now law that you must provide your skills and services for free and aren't allowed to make a profit.

What's evil is allowing the government control over housing markets. Why should I be forced to provide a home to someone who can't afford it? So I worked my ass off to build my equity only to see it go to shit because Joe someone over there could afford an apartment because of some mental illness he or she suffers?

What's evil is allowing the government any control over what I can and can't do with my body, my speech and my beliefs.

Also, I'm not even a religious person but I seriously fucking hate it when commies like you use the whole, "Well the bible says this" crap. Well the bible also talks about carrying a sword at all times and telling the government to go fuck themselves on occasion. Shit you morons hate.

Full blown socialism and full blown communism will never work. Even the socialized programs we have now are garbage and a drain on our society. I say get rid of it. Prices will naturally drop and quality will rise due to more competition. It's basic economics.

I thought you people were supposed to be smart? 🤔

How can in our nation's capitol you can't bear arms when the Constitution sitting in the archives protects your right to do so?

Because it is literally a piece of paper. It stops protecting you the moment the men enforcing the laws start ignoring it.

At that point, it's your arms that protect your right to arms. So far, very few people have been willing to stand up and challenge that (myself included, not trying to call anyone out).

It's a basic prisoner's dilemma. If we all resist we have rights. If one resists he loses rights and his life. If one doesn't resist he loses rights and keeps his life. Resisting ends up being irrational if you think you will be doing it alone, since nothing changes except you getting prosecuted.

Ultimately someone has to be the first to stand up. That lowers the bar for the next to stand up and so on.

The question is, who is that guy that slings an AR, walks into downtown DC and says "no thank you" when requested to give it up. I'll be honest -- that isn't me at this point. It isn't most of us. And that is why the constitution won't protect our rights.

your right, but let me spread some knowledge, Washington DC is NOT a part of the united states and it should not have voting congressman it is a corporation distract and In actuality residence shouldn't be aloud to vote for president. Though a capital city, it is ironic that residents of Washington lack full self-governance. Representation in Congress is limited to a non-voting delegate to the House of Representatives and a shadow senator. In 1964, Washingtonians were first allowed to vote in Presidential elections; the city was allowed to elect its own mayor only in 1973. the rest of the story <https://washington.org/dc-information/washington-dc-history>
